Allowed Claims: 1-44.

REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: none of the prior art either alone or in combination disclose or teach of the claimed combination of limitations to warrant a rejection under 35 USC 102 or 103.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 1, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of a display device comprising a controller as claimed, specifically wherein said controller is operable to control the image formation apparatus to display a message concerning the opportunity to prevent the power down process prior to the end of the predetermined delay period.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 10, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of a display device comprising a controller as claimed, specifically wherein said controller is configured to switch some of the pixels to an ON state so as to create a message concerning the opportunity to prevent the light source from being switched to the OFF state prior to the end of a predetermined delay period after the second power command.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 16, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of a display device as claimed, specifically comprising a means for switching some of the pixels to the ON state so as to create a message concerning the opportunity to prevent the means for supplying light from being switched to the OFF state prior to the end of a predetermined delay period after the first power command.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 18, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of a display device comprising means for performing a power down process after a predetermined delay period as claimed, specifically further wherein said means controls a means for forming images to display a message concerning the opportunity to prevent a power down process prior to the end of the predetermined delay period.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 19, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of a method of operating a display device as claimed, specifically comprising the step of directing light onto a small portion of the display device in the form of a message concerning the opportunity to prevent the light source from being switched to an OFF state prior to the end of the predetermined delay period after the second power command.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 25, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of a method of operating a display device comprising the step of performing a power down process after a predetermined delay period as claimed, specifically comprising the step of displaying a message concerning the opportunity to prevent the power down process prior to the end of the predetermined delay period.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 30, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of computer memory encoded with executable instructions for operating a display device comprising a step for performing a power down process after a predetermined delay period as claimed, specifically further comprising the step for controlling the display device to display a message concerning the opportunity to prevent the power down process prior to the end of the predetermined delay period and not performing the power down process in response to a receipt of a second power command prior to the end of said delay period.

Specifically, with respect to independent claim 37, none of the prior art alone or in combination disclose or teach of computer memory encoded with executable instructions for operating an image formation apparatus comprising the steps for switching at least a substantial majority of the pixels to the OFF state and for maintaining the light source in an ON state in response to a second power command as claimed, specifically further comprising the step of switching some of the pixels to the ON state so as to create a message concerning the opportunity to prevent the light source from being switched to the OFF state prior to the end of a predetermined delay period.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
